FROM THE PRESS GALLERY

GOOD STORIES THAT ARE TOLD IN WASHINGTON.

"Not a Dollar's Wuf of Difference Twixt Two Nigger Gals.

St. Louis Republic.

"Private" John Allen, of Mississippi, has deservedly acquired and brilliantly sustained the reputation of being the wit of the house. While on especially good terms with himself some nights ago he told this little tale in a very sad tone of voice:

"When you speak about your dead members," he said, "it reminds me of a speech I made once against the extravagance of congressional funerals. That speech went down to Mississippi and when I got back there, an old friend of mine came up to me and said: 'John, old fellow, we read what you had to say about them congressional funerals, and your constituents indorse every word of it. By gad, you just tell them up there in Washington that if you die you don't ask them to bury you; you've got lots of friends down here who'll take pleasure in doing it.'"

The honorable gentleman from Mississippi then told about an adventure with his bosom friend, Colonel "Tom" Ochiltree, of Texas, during the war. Colonel "Tom," by the way, is a humorist of no mean ability himself, and converses with the best of 'em when gathered around the festal board at Chamberlain's old hotel in Washington.

They were behind a rail pile one day, with bullets flying around them, when Ochiltree began to shiver.

"I'm laying out here in this swamp, and it will give me the ague," he said. Allen tried to encourage him as much as he could, but Ochiltree went on: "I don't know of any interest I have in these territories that would justify me in coming out here and exposing myself in this way."

"Then he says: 'You're not engaged are you?'"

"I says, 'No.'

"'Well,' he says, 'you stick your head up and see if you can see them fellers coming.'"

"Just then a lark up in a persimmon tree began to sing, and Ochiltree looked up and says, 'Ah, bird, if I had your wings I wouldn't be singing around here. I'd be in Texas before night.'"

Thomas Nelson Page, delineator of the old-time southern negro, tells this story on a Virginia friend, and his ebony-colored man-servant, Sam.

"One day Sam, arrayed in his meetin' clothes,' appeared before his employer and with an expansive grin on his shining face, said he was 'gwine to git married,' at the same time producing a license.

"'To whom?' inquired his master

"'I'se gwine ter marry Sallie, sub,' replied Sam.

"'But this license is made out to Susan,' was the objection.

"'Lawdy, datain't right. I'se g'wine ter marry Sallie.'

"'Well, then you will have to get another license.'

"'Massa, wha-what dat g'wine ter cos'?'

"'One dollar, Sam.'

"'Oh, Gawd, massa, den I'se g'wine ter marry Susan, 'deed there ain't no dollar's diff'rence b'tween enny two nigger gals in town.'"

The great sacred mace of the house of representatives is a gilded standard crowned by an American eagle and is supposed to symbolize the authority of the government. It is used to suppress any disturbances beyond the control of the speaker, and when held before obstreperous members, representing, as it does the supreme authority of the land, its effect upon such belligerents is in most cases wonderful. One of these few exceptions, however, brought fourth a most amusing remark from the bearer of the mace, Colonel Ike Hill, veteran official of the house and then sergeant-of-arms, a remark which convulsed those within earshot. At this time a lively exchange of personalities was taking place between two members, one of whom, a new man, was particularly boisterous and noisy. After commanding him to sit down, which he refused to do, the speaker pounded fiercely with his gravel and ordered the sergeant-at-arms to exercise his authority and preserve order. As the defiant one was a republican and Colonel Ike an intense democrat, he responded with alacrity to the speakar's order.

Holding the mace aloft and with grave and dignified mien he slowly walked up to the offending member and held the sacred symbol before him. The member, however, apparently not realizing what he was doing, still refused to be seated, much to Colonel Ike's irritation. Finally he could stand the suspense no longer, and leaning over, pointed the eagle-topped staff at him in a threatening manner, and exclaimed in a high-pitched stage-whisker: "I'll peck you, if you don't sit right down!"

Senator-elect "Joe" Blackburn is famed far and wide for his apparently inexhaustible anecdotes. "The Senator has an unconscious streak of humor and some good stories are told on him which he never recited," said a prominent Blue Grass politician the other day. "I remember one when Mr. Blackburn was practicing law in Kentucky, which may show that he fears nothing. A young fellow came into his office, and after showing some recommendations and expressing a longing desire to get work of some kind, was given an opportunity to do something. Mr. Blackburn handed him a writ and told him to go to a certain house and serve the paper on the tenant. 'Now don't come back and say you couldn't find him,' he cautioned. 'Nail it to the door if you have to, but serve.' The eager young man started out and returned an hour later, minus his hat and collar and with his face covered with bruises, and his clothes torn into shreds.

"'Well,' said Mr. Blackburn, 'did you serve it?' 'No, sir,' replied the battered employee. 'The tenant licked me and told me to bring the paper back to you.' Blackburn arose from his chair, and towering up with indignation, said: 'Here, suh, take that writ back and serve it on that tenant, suh, and tell him, for me, suh, that by —— suh, he can't intimidate me thro' you, suh.'"

COTTON WENT SPINNING TODAY.

BEAT RECORDS OF THE SEASON AND CLOSED FIRM.

Advanced Twenty Points Over Yesterday and Ten Points Over The Best of the Season

New York, March 3.—Cotton passed all previous records today. Under the pressure of the demoralized Liverpool market this morning it jumped a dollar a bale at opening During two hours of trading the excitement equalled Tuesday, when the record of the season was broken Thousands of bales changed hands, and the price advanced twenty points over yesterday, and ten points higher than the best prices of the season.

In tone there is as much firmness in nine and a half spot cotton as there was at six and a half. Closing figures: March, 37-39; April, 88-39; May and June the same; July 39-40; August, 30-31.

The distressing war being waged between the English and the Boers has been for many months of such absorbing interest as to almost overshadow that no less tragic state of things in famine-stricken India. Happily in the latter case we may give not only sympathy, but practical help. The famine is said to be the most wide spread of the century. Although the most gigantic efforts are being made by the British Government, it will be impossible to relieve more than a tithe of the distress. Read this touching appeal and hand your contributions at once to Mrs. F. E. Ross (at the Southern Loan and Trust Co's. building,) who will act as treasurer and forward all money contributed.

"While you are enjoying your healthful and bountiful repast there are multitudes of people in India who have barely enough food to keep soul and body together, while thousands on thousands are dying of starvation. Many of these are christians and are our brothers and sisters in Christ Missionaries are calling upon us for help. One dollar will support one of these hungry brothers or sisters for twenty days. Five dollars will support a family of five persons for twenty days. 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these My brethren, ye have done it unto Me.'"

The following contributions have been made already. All contributions will be acknowledged in the Telegram.

CONSUMERS TO BLAME.

"Purity" Says That Pure Goods May Be Had When Wanted.

To the Editor of the Telegram:

In your issue of yesterday referring to the United States Senate investigating food adulteration you state nearly every manufactured article of food is adulterated from 5 to 60 per cent. We do not doubt the truth of your statement. The consumers are often more to blame for this state of affairs than the manufacturers and dealers on account of their demand for goods at a less price than pure goods can be produced, and instead of dealing with first-class manufacturers and merchants they prefer to patronize those who have no reputation. If the American people wish to do away with food adulteration they must decline to deal with "Cheap John" manufacturers and dealers and buy standard brands of goods from first-class concerns. People who want pure first-class goods can always get them if they are willing to pay for them. Purity.

WAR VESSEL FOR CHARLESTON

TO PAY THE EXPENSE OF NAVAL MILITIA TO THE STATES.

There Has Not Yet Been Any Consideration Given War or Private Claims—Capt. Price at the Capitol.

Special to the Telegram.

Washington, March 3—Much interest is being manifested in the coming exposition to be held in Charleston, S. C., and the delegation in congress are working to secure a government exhibit. Col. Elliot who represents the Charleston, South Carolina District in the house has been especially active in trying to aid in the exposition Other South Carolina congressmen who are aiding in the enterprise are Representatives Norton and Stokes. Both of the congressmen have sent letters to the exposition company promising their support to the movement.

The South Carolina delegation hope to get the secretary of the navy to send a war vessel to Charleston during the exposition. If this is done it will attract a large crowd to Charleston from all over the state, as well as from North Carolina and other surrounding states.

A bill has been introduced into congress for the purpose of paying the claims of several southern states growing out of the expenditures by the States for the pay and expenses of the naval militia. The bill has been introduced by Colonel Elliot, of South Carolina, and among other states interested are, it is said, Virginia and North Carolina. Col. Elliot will push this bill as earnestly as possible, and hopes to get a favorable report from the committe on naval affairs, to which the bill has been referred for consideration Col. Elliot expressed the belief the other day that the bill would be reported from the committee to the house without any unnecessary delay.

Friday was private bill day in the house. As usual, however, the republican managers from a method to deprive the committee on claims of the right to the day to which it was entitled under the rules. The consideration of the "emergency" relief bill, for Porto Rico, which was drawn at a conference Thursday night between the president and several republican leaders, who became alarmed at the revolt of the republican newspapers on account of the passage of the Porto Rican bill the other day, was forced upon the house by the managers, and occupied most of the day yesterday.

Thus far during the session there has not been a single day devoted to the consideration of war, or private claims, in which class of bills the southern members are mostly interested. The policy of the republican managers is not to allow this class of bills to pass, although they are mostly good and just claims, as the leaders wish to keep down the appropriations as much as it is possible to do.

Captain Charles Price, who has been in the city for some time has returned home. He has been here in the interest of the bondholders in the celebrated Wilkes county, (N. C.,) bond case, which is now pending before the United States supreme court. It is said that April 2nd, has been fixed by the court for the hearing of this case. At that date, Captain Price will return to Washington for the purpose of Arguing it before the court. The decision, however, will not be rendered for some time after the hearing of the case in the supreme court.

Mr. G. M. Scott, of Greensboro, is in Washington for a few days, stopping at the St. James hotel.

Republicans Want Early Nominations.

Washington, March 3—Word has gone out from the republican executive committee that early nominations for members of the house are desired. It is the idea of the committee that the congressional nominations should contitute a sort of skirmish line so the results may be shown in advance of the regular forces.

WHAT AN OBSERVER SEES AT TRAIN TIME.

Written for the Saturday Telegram.

There is not a depot in North Carolina where there is more bustle, hustle and movement during the day than at Greensboro. It is a fine field for observing human nature in both rough and polished settings. If a man wants to see many shades of life he can find no finer field of observation.

There is the tired mother who holds in her arms the small infant with the large lungs and which seems possessed a diabolical determination to howl at the top of its voice to the intense discomfort of the pale, nervous gentleman who wears spectacles and thin side whiskers, and endeavors to read his newspaper with some degree of composure and satisfaction. His efforts, however, end in dismal and ignominious failure, for the more the distracted mother tries to quiet and subdue her obstreperous offspring, the louder it yells and opens his mouth the wider, until his little red pug nose seems to have disappeared into the abyss of the vocal volcano. The nervous gentleman folds up his paper with a snort of disgust and with a look of impotent rage that speaks volumes as to his ideas on corporal punishment, and seeks relief outside the waiting room.

Here also may be seen the man who wears clothes of the clerical cut, with white cravat and a hat that has seen better days He also has an umbrella of the parachute variety, which in case of emergency can be used for open air meetings. His hypnotic glance could transfix a frying size spring chicken, cause it to murmur a last farewell to home and mother and lay on its back and turn up its toes, helplessly resigned to its fate.

If you are lucky you may get a sight of the ebon-hued Pullman porter who affects much consequence of manner and the accent of the Northern tourist. In his guileless youth, before he had received the veneering of an effete civilization, in all probability he could on the darkest night have detected the difference between a dominique and a shanghai pullet by the feathers on its neck, and by an almost supernatural instinct find the best melon in the patch. Travel and tips have combined to make him a necessity and a nuisance.

Occasionally in a crowd there is the stout man who is in a hurry, and as he jostles through the crowd he places his ponderous foot on the toes of an inoffensive bystander. The stout man does not stop to apologize, but passes on, leaving the injured party to do the green corn dance unloved and alone.

And the close man—the skinflint—he asks a man the time of day rather than look at his own watch. He would if possible use the wart on the back of his neck for a collar button. When he passes his money in at the ticket window his fingers twitch convulsively and when he gets his ticket and change they twitch again. When the train pulls in he gathers up his belongings and gets in the second-class car and kicks to himself because the trucks on his car have four instead of six wheels.

There is the effusive and impulsive miss of sweet sixteen or thereabouts, who goes down to the station to meet a friend of the same age—she is usually accompanied by an individual of about the same age and intelligence but of different sex. Such meetings afford a study in demonstrativeness. When the visiting friend alights from the train they rush frantically forward with expressions of ecstatic rapture, clasp each other in a loving embrace, and in the dilemma of the moment are as apt to imprint the kiss of fond affection upon their dear little noses as upon the cherry lips made for the business; (young men could make no such mistakes) and if there were to be many such meetings going on at the same time traffic would have to be suspended until the spasms were over.

Under almost every circumstance the pathetic side of life is in evidence, and at the depot is no exception. Off to one side on a truck is a white box with a piece of paper tacked on it. Near it stands a little group clad in black. In that box is laid the form that perhaps a few days ago went away, full of life, hope and enthusiasm. The spirit that lately dwelt therein was the pride and joy of the gay and loving group that came down to see their dear one off and bid him godspeed—the same group now clad in black and standing in the shadow. Perhaps he was caught in a wreck, and suffered untold agonies, or perhaps died of fever in some distant place—any way there are the remains and there is the group in black, and the more observant one who takes a second look is made to feel that

"With him lay dead both joy and pride."

Private Letter Says that the Army Can Go from Africa to Asia Whenever Necessary.

Berlin, March 3.—A private letter from St. Petersburg says that Russian action against Kebal in northern Afghanistan is imminent. The letter says that diplomats at St. Petersburg believe that the continuous war preparations of England mean that England is getting ready to meet not only the Boers, but to send, if necessary, an army from South Africa to the Persian Gulf and Central Asia.

MAY BEGIN PEACE TALK.

Presidents Kruger and Steyn said to be Meeting for That.

London, March 3—The Times prints a dispatch from Lorenso Marquez dated yesterday saying that President Kruger left Pretoria to confer with President Steyn at some unknown place. The dispatch adds that people conversant with Boer public opinion predicts that this conference is preliminary to the opening of negotiations for peace.

A dispatch from Ladysmith states that when General White reached the post office after the arrival of Dunconald's cavalry, he was called upon for a speech and said: "I thank you, people of Ladysmith for the heroic manner in which you have assisted me during the seige. It hurt me terribly to cut down rations, but thank God, we have kept the flag flying. General White was much affected and led in the singing of the national anthem Correspondents say that in the semi-darkness the appearance of the gray haired general, leading hundreds of bareheaded men in singing, made a picture never to be forgotten.

SATURDAY, MAR. 3, 1900.

THIS EVENING'S TELEGRAM.

Our readers will recollect our announcement last week that we expected to set before our readers each Saturday a paper full of specially prepared matter designed to interest and please them. Of course this idea will be enlarged upon as soon as our facilities enables us to do so. The paper this afternoon is not a shabby sheet, we hope The selected articles are fine, especially the one on the dresses of Josephine as produced by Miss Julia Authur. Anything about the unhappy Josephine and her giant husband, Napoleon, the Colossus of the ages, is interesting. This article is especially so.

Our contributor who chooses to head his column "Obiter Dicta," is highly interesting in his scheme to replace Dunn and Bradstreet, while the column headed "What an observer se at train time," manifests the deft hand of an artist and will appeal to any one who has been much at the Greensboro depot. Besides these there are plenty of items and selections of general interest.

SENTIMENT ON EACH SIDE.

There has been, and is yet, considerable discussion on the subject of the nomination of Mr. C. H. Mebane by the Democratic convention for re-election to the place he now holds. In the papers over the state we notice considerable sentiment both for and against the idea.

The Telegram re-expresses its opinion that the scheme is advisable, for the purpose of giving a clear and unmistakable endorsement of the effort that some of the friends of education are making in the state to entirely divorce the whole school system from politics. Mr. Mebane, it is claimed by the opponents of the idea of nominating him, is a partisan. We will not discuss that question. Granting that he is, it will all the more emphasize the non-partisan action of the Democratic party in nominating him.

PROXIMITY BUREAU.

The Telegram has announced its intention of becoming a reflector of the life and business of Greensboro. In carrying out this intention, so important a part of that life and business as the large mill settlement generally called Proximity, from the name of the mills there, cannot be neglected. There is so much capital invested there, so much labor employed and so much work done, that a paper wishing to at all fully represent Greensboro must be represented there. Therefore we have established a regular Proximity bureau, and secured the services of Rev. V. L. Marsh, the efficient pastor of the Methodist church there, to take charge of it. He will furnish the news from day to day as it occurs, and will have charge of all the business connected with it. We hope to make this an interesting column of the Telegram.

The continued rise in cotton is having its effect on the next year's crop already. This comes from Georgia:

Commissioner of Agriculture Stevens say the department has sold on a reasonable estimate 1,000,000 morefertilizer tags this year than last. "This Indicates," said the commissioner, "that the farmers are sowing every available piece of ground they have in cotton. In a few days they will be plowing up the oat fields, where the crop appears to be injured, and will plant it in cotton."

To be sure. The resoluters and whereasers who are now curlaining the crop on paper will in a few weeks be plowing every six months old steer on the plantation for the purpose of doubling their acreage.

We give the grip to Colonel John Morgan, of Kentucky, and compliment him on having produced a very reasonable theory concerning the murder of Goebel.

"Not in the trust," is getting to be a familiar phrase in advertisements these days. But that is not the question. The chances are that any man not in the trust today would get in tomorrow if he had the right kind of a proposition made to him. It is all well enough to proclaim your loyalty to the people, but if you saw that your business was to be destroyed and that you could save it and your honor, the chances are that you would go into the trust.—Danville Bee.

When a virtue is made of necessity, it becomes no virtue.

The Charlotte Observer says:

We have heard it asserted that the editorial writer on The New York Sun staff who is responsible for the editorials on religious questions of the day is an infidel. If so, he is a far better man than the typical skeptic of the day who cloaks his unbelief with ecclesiasticism as the following paragraph from the Sun proves:

Infidelity parading under the colors of faish is an odious spectacle before God and man.

And we have heard that this writer is a Catholic, which sounds more like it.

Tales of the Town

A gentleman with hair and beard of silvery whiteness; an eye from which the years had not stolen the piercing glint; a carriage suggesting military training; a manner attracting attention and challenging admiration; withal, a bearing unmistakably suggesting the best of ante-bellum days; such he was, distinguished, commanding. In front of the government building he stood and watched a tiny tot of three years approach. To her gallantly: "I must always speak to the ladies; I like you; tell your mamma one old man is in love with you." To the tot's father, accompanying her: "Teach her to work, its only God's providence that can make anything of a boy or girl brought up i idleness"

A stranger coming to stay in Greensboro gets two questions fired at him the first day, the first of which is: "What church do you attend?" The next individual he meets is pretty sure to ask him the same question, and the next one will likely repeat the dose. This is a fine sign. It shows that the church influence, which is at present the best known to our civilization, is dominant here. The minister and the church have not surrendered in Greensboro to society nor the ways of mammon. It shows that there is church pride and enthusiasm here, which are requisites in the laity if a denomination or a local church is working successfully. When the stranger drops into his boarding house for the second time, he is pretty sure to pass this ru ing fire: "What church do you attend?" "Ah, I hoped we would get you." "Oh, that is a good place, but when you want to make a change come to our church."

Mention was made of another question; it is "How do you like Greensboro?" If the new-comer has been observant he will state some of the causes which give him favorable impressions, and such characteristics as were likely to appeal to him. To one it appears that Greensboro is a charming place, charming in the cordial frankness and friendliness of the people, delightful in the simple and unassuming manners, and sweetly restive by absence of boast and brag. The town is in a transition period, throwing off the clothes of its youth but not yet quite donned the TOGA VIRILIS of the city. It is not in too big a hurry to be comfortable, nor yet does it lag. It is an old town being made over; directly it will be a new one, up to date, in the van; a little more push, enthusiasm and union, and the thing is done.

Again, the more thoughtful have a habit of asking this question: "How does Greensboro stand as a town in the estimation of the people of the state, so far as you have observed?" Replying to this, one may use words that seem to flatter, but which really are true and frank, for Greensboro stands high in North Carolina. A great many people regard it as the coming town of the state. This writer has had numbers of letters saying this very thing, "coming town." It is regarded as among the best residence towns in our state, and as growing rapidly in population and business. Its schools give it an educational flavor, and its quiet ways have caused it to be classed as somewhat of a Sunday school town, which is immensely in its favor. "It will be the convention town of the state," is often heard.

A few further remarks, intended to be neither didactic nor mandatory, may be excusable. One thing is sure, Greensboro has as fine a showing in brains, worth and energy, the three elements that move the world, as any town in North Carolina, population considered. As a distinguished citizen expressed it, "raw force" is here in abundance. A little more union, purpose and direction, and the town will be far on its road towards the head of the procession. Working and letting the world know what you are doing will accomplish anything.

PROXIMITY HAPPENINGS.

Putting in New Machinery—The Band Has a Good Leader—Personals.

Telegram, Bureau, Proximity.

We welcome to our midst Mr. Geo. Smith who hails from Salisbury. He came among us several days ago, Mrs. Smith came yesterday.

Mr. Bryson, a machinest from McAdensville, who has been here for the past several weeks, has moved his family here and gone to housekeeping.

We are glad to note the improved condition of Mrs. Crutchfield, who has been on the sick list for several days

It is with regret we learn that the condition of Mrs. J. M. Allred is no better, she has been confined to her bed for the past three or four weeks.

The work of putting new machinery in the mill keeps steadily on. Six men from the White Machine Works are here putting in spinning machinery.

James Clark expects to go to Haw River tonight to visit relatives.

Mrs. J. J. McDonald is confined to her room on account of sickness.

The band boys met last night for regular practice. They are to be congratulated on having a good teacher with them, in the person of Mr. Wilson, who spent two weeks with the boys previous to his coming here to live. Now, that he is here permanently, we may expect rapid progress from those learning to "toot the horn."

Mr. Patterson, who has charge of the district school here, was called home yesterday by a telegram announcing the serious illness of his sister.

The pastor of the Methodist church here has just returned from a visit to relatives in Southern Guilford.

Mrs. Clapp, who lives near the Finishing Mills, has gone on a visit to relatives near McLeansville.

There will be service at the Methodist church tomorrow. Preaching at the regular hour by the pastor. Sunday school at 9:30.

Happy thought, this is Saturday, and the mills stop at four o'clock.

For the past two or three weeks, C. A. Long has been in the country looking after farming interests.

COSTUMES TO RAVE ABOUT

How Julia Arthur Dresses the Part of Josephine.

FAMOUS JEWELS REPRODUCED

All the Gowns Worn by the Actress in "More Than Queen" Are Copies of Those of the Empe.or.

Philadelphia Record.

There is no woman on the American stage today who can wear clothes with more grace and distinction than Julia Arthur. In "A Lady of Quality," she was a picturesque figure of the time of George IV, wearing some very elegant costumes, but they and everything else in the memory of h theatre goer pale into insignificance beside the 'more than queenly' creations in which she appears as Josephine in "More Than Queen."

The period of the Napoleonic era offers opportunity for all the magnificence possible and the most lavish advantage has been taken of it. The chief beauty of the play, as presented by Miss Arthur, lies largely in the fact that she has an extremely artistic comprehension of the period during which Napoleon ruled This man was a civilization unto himself, and he made literature and the arts subservient to his wishes and his ideas. He seemed to understand the educational value of both. That is why he introduced such picturesque costume during his reign and such an extreme form of military conventionality into his regime. Both were artistic, but it is difficult to reproduce the artistic qualities of this man's views in these days without deep study and an extreme sympathy with the thought of the period. This Miss Arthur has succeeded in doing. She has reproduced the period in a manner which will please the most intense student of history, the most learned antiquarian, and the result is a most artistic production—one which is thoroughly sympathetic to the most dramatic period of European history. The costumes are just as gorgeous as the versatile genius of Napoleon conceived them when he changed the whole idea of woman's dress, especially a change which has been felt up to the present time, and which is known as the "Empire style."

The costumes Miss Arthur he self wears as Josephine, the fascinating Creole, who cajoled and conquered Napoleon, are six in number, and represent not only a munificent outlay of money, but endless pains and effort in the making. They are absolutely exact copies, some of gowns worn by the Empress and preserved in the Louvre Musee; others of costumes she had her portrait painted in, as the second ad dress, which is taken from Prudhon's famous painting now at Versailles, and the coronation robe from Louis David's renowned canvas on exhibition in the Louvre Galleries. All her jewelry is faithfully reproduced from the crown jewels actually on exhibition in the Louvra in what is called the crown treasure of Napoleon.

In the prologue, when Josephine, the widow of the Victome de Beauharnias, first meets the young Corsican soldier of fortune, Bonapate, she wears what is possibly she most picturesqu of al her costumes. It is of sage green crepe de Chine, the hem of the skirt bordered with sable, and an exquisite pattern of white silk lace appnique work above this. There is a wide silk sash of old rose wound around the bust and hanging in long graceful ends, with an Oriental border in subdued colors. A short Empire jacket, with long sleeves, and in harmonious shades of green, is worn over this gown. A big poke hat of green straw, faced and lined with pink gauze, and covered with white feathers and red roses, is tied under Josephine's coquettish chin with green satin ribbon strings.

IN CLEOPATRA'S GARMENTS.

In act one Josephine is the wife of General Bonaparte, who is just returning from his Egyptian campaign. Josephine was not then the kind of wife to weep in her husband's absence, and the first scene shows her about to depart to a costume ball. Her love of dress and admiration has led her to appear as Cleopatra and the sight she presents is truly gorgeous. She seems one brilliant mass of spangles and stones and chains of beads. Such a Cleopatra might well have conquered Marc Antony, and Cæsar too, for that matter. The gown is of dull pink crepe-de-Chine, covered with silver spangles and dull blue stones. At the foot of the trailing skirt is a wide curving pattern of blue, green and gold spangles, in the form of a serpent, giving a wierd, sinuous effect. Over this pink garment is worn a sort of slip in Egyptian style, made of pink plush and studded thickly with pearls and turquoises. This garment is open down the front, showing the crepe-de-Chine skirt underneath, and hangs down to the knees at the side. The girdle, which falls in one long tab down the front, is of brown plush covered with vari-colored stones in antique patterns. There are no sleeves. The arms are adorned with snake bracelets and ancient Egyptian coin circlets. Across the bust and about the neck Miss Arthur wears chains of topazes and pear shaped pearls, while antique Egytian beads, strung together, are looped across the bust and waist. A golden bandeau crowns her dusky hair, in which she also wears a big white lotus flower. A long, dull gauze veil, spangled with gold, is arranged on the head and hangs with long ends. The crowning touch of glory in this costume is the blue scarabaeus, or sacred beetle, sent by Napoleon from Egypt, and which Josephine wears proudly on her breast. The necklace worn by Miss Arthur in this act is an act exact reproduction of the one Josephine received from the City of Milan during the Italian campaign of General Napoleon.

When starting for the ball, Josephine dons a superb cloak of dull green and gold velvet, woven by hand in an ancient Egyptian pattern, the outlines of which are marked by gold spangles. This cloak is lined with real ermine and bordered on the outside with stone marten, which also forms a deep cape collar, fastened at the neck by a long, heavy gold cord and tassel.

Act II shows Bonaparte as the First Consul and being advised and implored by his clever and ambitious wife to reject the crown offered him. Josephine wears here a short empire gown of white crepe-de-Chine dotted with large and brilliant gold spangles. There is a ruche of gold lace at the hem of the skirt, and in the short waist a small "V" is let in and filled with white applique lace. There is a heavy gold fringe on the short puffed sleeves. The gold girdle bears a medallion, surrounded with diamonds, an exact copy of the Empress's girdle. A small necklace only is worn with this costume, and three gold bands in the hair. A rich cashmere shawl of the rare and genuine variety is thrown over one shoulder and hangs gracefully down each side.

THE CORONATION ROBE.

The coronation robe worn in Act III reaches apparently the acme of magnificence. It is of heavy white satin, heavily embroidered in gold bullion and thickly studded with colored stones, gold-corded fringe borders the skirt, which stretches out in a long train The sleeves are long and covered with gold embroidery. The golden girdle is set with rhinestones and big oval pink pearls, while at the bust is a breast knot of diamonds and pendent pearl-shaped pearls. The necklace is of large sapphires, surrounded with diamonds; the same large pear shaped pearls hang from this also. Her diadem of diamonds set in silver, her coronet of diamonds and pearls and all the other jewels worn in this act are copies of the authentic crown jewels, and the costume is an absolute reproduction of her portrait in David's famous Coronation painting. The long robe is of ruby velvet, lined and bordered with royal ermine. On the velvet are appliqued the golden bees—the Napoleonic emblem for industry—and the robe is bordered with a pattern copied from the original robe in bullion embroidery showing laurel wreaths and the letter "N." This robe is very heavy and the dress also, together about forty five pounds, so it can be seen that Josephine carried considerable weight at court. The imperial crown, which Napoleon places on her head in the ceremony, is a magnificent affair of diamonds. rubies and pearls

When next seen, Josephine in Act IV is at St Cloud in half mourning for the little child of her daughter Hortense. Her costume is of dar gray satin, particulary becoming to Miss Arthur, spangled with steel beads. There are two panels of a darker shade of velvet, heavily embroidered in dark gray pearl beads The sleeves are of gray gauze, covered with steel spangles. A ruche of gray silk borders the hem, and around the neck of the empire waist is a standing collar of gray lace. On her head is a crown representing ears of wheat, with a net of pearls and rhinestones at the back holding up her hair and she also wears a massive broad golden comb studied with pearls.

A BEAUTY IN SATIN.

It the last act of this magnificent spectable the Empress is arrayed in garments of unsurpassed splendor. In a vain effort to keep Napoleon from dissolving their union, she makes herself more beautiful than ever, and uses all her feminine art and heart to avert the separation upon which he has determined. For this act Miss Arthur has chosen a heavy white satin, on which is hand-embroidered a graceful wheat pat ern in gold bullion and large pearl beads There are three long pane s in the skirt, made of cloth of gold, which is thickly covered with gold spangles and beads. The short sleeves are a network of pearl and gold beads, with a girdle of pendant pearls.

The robe worn over this gown is of lemon-colored velvet, lined with white satin and heavily bordered with ermine. This robe, like the ruby velvet, is covered with the Napoleonic bees, but in this case they are still more elaborate, for the wings are formed of topaze stones and the heads of pearls. The belt is of gold, and is studded with topazes, and has a de pending fringe of gold and pearl beads. A magnificent set of jewels is worn in this act, including the imperial crown, which the angry Empress dashes to the ground when she hears of Napoleon's decree that she shall not enter his apartments, and the final scene shows her proud head bare of the diadem of the Empire, but crowned anew in her realization of the Emperor's love, and Josephine is again "More Than Queen"—a woman!

For the Babies.

There is no better medicine for the babies than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Its pleasant taste and prompt and effectual cures make it a favorite with mothers and small children It quickly cures their coughs and colds, preventing pneumonia or other serious consequences. It also cures croup and has been used in tens of thousands of cases without a single failure so far as we have been able to learn It not only cures croup, but when given as soon as the croupy cough appears, will prevent the attack. In cases of whooping cough it liquefies the tough mucous, making it easier to expectorate, and lessens the severity and frequency of the paroxysms of coughing, thus depriving that disease of all dangerous consequences. A NOVEL ENTERTAINMENT.

Miss Dowd Gives a Progressive Story Party to the Just for Funners.

Charlotte Observer.

At her home last night Miss Nan Dowd entertained the "Just for Fun Club" in a most unique and enjoyable manner. She sat before the club a mental repast in the form of a progressive story, which consisted in weaving into ten short stories the names of some of the most prominent families in the city. The following was the story served at the tenth table:

A (city sport) and a (grocer) agreed to see which could eat the most (city sport). They each eat a (oculist) and died. They were buried by a woman named (Y. M. C. A worker) (Methodist steward) Next day a (a sweet old lady) exploded, causing two (preachers) to run over a bicycle (R. R. superintendent), and a lame rooster that could not (doctor) It is a wonder that the explosion did not (oculist) and forest, but it simply ruined a (photographer) belonging to a poor (express agent), who lived by the (professor). "How much will you (banker)?" asked his wife who was a (musician) woman, "to repair our loss?" He cruelly replied: "Ever since I (architect) I have had troubles, and I was just thinking (preacher) if money would have to be spent to cover our losses."

At every other table the story was equally attractive.

Prizes for the best stories were awarded to Mr. Julian Little and Miss Littles.

For the first time the club widened its sphere of influence by the admission of—men.

MORGAN ON GOEBEL MURDER.

Says It Was Neither Political Nor Personal, But a Gamble.

Lexington, Ky., Dispatch yesterday.

John Morgan, the famous mountain detective and United States deputy marshal, who was displaced by a Republican when Judge Evans was made judge of the Federal court, is quoted as saying:

"I am not an officer now, nor will I have any chance at any part of the $100,000 appropriation voted for the conviction of the assassin of William Goebel, but I know who the man is, and inside of a week I can land him. I could arrest five men whom I know to have been in Frankfort that day. I can from them secure evidence which would clinch my case. The slayer of Goebel was not a Republican, nor was he what they might termed Democrat. He is a gambler, and had bet on the result of the election; that is, he and his friends had wagered that Goebel would not be governor, play or pay, and the deed was committed to prevent losing the money."

Mrs Harriet Evans, Hinsdale, Ill., writes: "I never fail to relieve my children of croup at once by using One Minute Cough Cure. I would not feel safe without it." Quickly cures coughs, colds, grippe and all throat and lung diseases." Howard Gardner.

His Life Was Saved.

Mr. J. E. Lilly, a prominent citizen of Hannibal, Mo., lately had a wonderful deliverance from death. In telling of it he says: "I was taken with typhoid fever that ran into pneumonia. My lungs became hardened. I was so weak I couldn't even sit up in bed. Nothing helped me. I expected to soon die of consumption, when I heard of Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle gave great relief. I continued to use it and now am well and strong. I can't say too much in its praise." This marvellous medicine is the surest and quickest cure in the world for all throat and lung trouble. Regular sizes 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottles free at C. E. SCROFULA AND ITS AWFUL HORRORS

—CURED BY—

Johnston's Sarsaparilla

QUART BOTTLES.

A MOST WONDERFUL CURE.

A Grand Old Lady Gives Her Experience.

Mrs. Thankful Orilla Hurd lives in the beautiful village of Brighton, Livingston Co., Mich. This venerable and highly respected lady was born in the year 1812, the year of the great war, in Hebron, Washington Co., New York. She came to Michigan in 1840, the year of "Tippecanoe and Tyler too." All her faculties are excellently preserved, and possessing a very retentive memory, her mind is full of interesting reminiscences of her early life, of the early days of the State of Michigan and the interesting and remarkable people she has met, and the stirring events of which she was a witness. But nothing in her varied and manifold recollections are more marvelous and worthy of attention than are her experiences in the use of JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA. Mrs. Hurd inherited a tendency and predisposition to scrofula, that terribly destructive blood taint which has cursed and is cursing the lives of thousands and marking thousands more as victims of the death angel. Transmitted from generation to generation, it is found in nearly every family in one form or another. It may make its appearance in dreadful running sores, in unsightly swellings in the neck or goitre, or in eruptions of varied forms. Attacking the mucous membrane, it may be known as catarrh in the head, or developing in the lungs it may be, and often is, the prime cause of consumption.

Speaking of her case, Mrs. Hurd says: "I was troubled for many years with a bad skin disease. My arms and limbs would break out in a mass of sores, discharging yellow matter. My neck began to swell and became very unsightly in appearance. My body was covered with scrofulous eruptions. My eyes were also greatly inflamed and weakened, and they pained me very much. My blood was in a very bad condition and my head ached severely at frequent intervals, and I had no appetite. I had sores also in my ears. I was in a miserable condition, I had tried every remedy that had been recommended, and doctor after doctor had failed. One of the best physicians in the state told me I must die of scrofulous consumption, as internal abcesses were beginning to form. I at length was told of Dr. Johnston, of Detroit, and his famous Sarsaparilla. I tried a bottle, more as an experiment than anything else, as I had no faith in it, and greatly to my agreeable surprise, I began to grow better. You can be sure I kept on taking it. I took a great many bottles. But I steadily improved until I became entirely well. All the sores healed up, all the bad symptoms disappeared. I gained perfect health, and I have never been troubled with scrofula since. Of course an old lady of 83 years is not a young woman, but I have had remarkably good health since then, and I firmly believe that JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA is the greatest blood purifier and the best medicine in the wide world, both for scrofula and as a spring medicine." This remarkably interesting old lady did not lok to be more than sixty, and she repeated several times, "I believe my life was saved by JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA."

The farmer's wife who raises chickens, knows that they must have food enough first to satisfy bare hunger, then enough more than that to make flesh and fat before they will begin to lay. In plain words you've got to put into the hen in the form of food what you get out of it in the shape of eggs. An ill nourished hen lays no eggs. The difference between the farmer's wife and her chickens is that she fancies she can take out of herself in daily cares and toils what she does not put back in the form of nourishment for nerve and body. But she can't. Sooner or later the woman who tries it breaks down.

The warning signs of physical breakdown are, among others, headache, weak stomach, flatulence, pain in side or back, difficult breathing, palpitation of the heart. These are only some of the indications of a derangement of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. The one sure remedy for this condition is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which strengthens the stomach, purifies the blood and nourishes and invigorates the nerves.

Mrs. Martha E. Barham, of Newville, Prince George Co., Va., writes: "I commenced to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in June, 1897, also his 'Favorite Prescription,' and I cannot express the benefit I have received from these medicines. I was suffering with what the doctors called chronic indigestion, torpid liver and vertigo. The doctor did not do me any good. My symptoms were giddiness in head, pains in chest and an uneasy feeling all over. I also suffered with female weakness. I was all run-down and could not do any work at all without suffering from nervous attacks, so I wrote to you for advice. You advised me to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Favorite Prescription.' When I commenced to use the medicines I weighed only 112 pounds, now I weigh 140 pounds. I thank God and Dr. R. V. Pierce for my recovery."

12 Cents Cotton.

Charlotte News.

A prominent mill man, who has cotton as well as machinery on th brain, says the outlook for 12 cent cotton is good. "I don't think there is a doubt but that it will go to 12 cents," said he. Every farmer who owns a bale looks upon it as a big nugget of gold.

Bismarck's Iron Nerve

Was the result of his splendid health. Indomitable will and tremendous energy are not found where stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels are out of order. If you want these qualities and the success they bring, use Dr King's New Life Pills. They develop every power of brain and body. Only 25c at Holton's drug store.

It is better to talk yourself up than to have other people run you down.

Free of Charge.

Any adult suffering from a cold settled on he breast, bronchitis, throat or lung troubles of any nature, who will call at Grissom & Fordham's, will be presented with a sample bottle of Boschee's German Syrup, free of charge. Only one bottle given to one person, and none to children without order from parents. No throat or lung remedy ever had such a sale as Boschee's German Syrup in all parts of the civilized world. Twenty years ago millions of bottles were given away, and your druggist will tell you its success was marvelous. It is really the only throat and lung trouble generally endorsed by physicians. Only 75-cent bottle will cure or prove its value. Sold by dealers in all civilized countries.

WINE OF CARDUI

Woman's Crowning Virtue.

BELTON, Mo., July 27.

For years I suffered terrible pains every month and my doctor told me I could not be cured except by an operation. I felt I could not submit to that and was so despondent I had given up all hopes of a cure. My husband insisted on my trying Wine of Cardui and at last thank God I did try it. Last month I did not have a pain, and did all my work, which I had not done in seven years.

MRS. MINNIE LITTLE.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

Modesty is the crowning virtue of American women. It is the trait that all mankind admires. A modest woman is the most pleasing of all created things. Because of this becoming virtue thousands of women prefer to suffer untold miseries rather than confide their troubles to a physician, and to even think of submitting to an examination is revolting. They can't get their own consent to an operation. Wine of Cardui permits sensitive women to retain their modesty. With it they can cure "female troubles" in the quiet of their own rooms. If special treatment is required they can write to the Advisory Department of the Chattanooga Medicine Co., and their letters will be promptly answered by women trained in the cure of womanly weaknesses and irregularities. There should be no hesitation. Delayed treatment means a chronic condition. The longer postponed the harder to cure.

OBITER DICTA.

Written for the Saturday Telegram.

A SCHEME OF COMMERCIAL RATING TO TAKE THE PLACE OF DUN'S AND BRADSTREET'S.

The writer met some time ago a village doctor with many ideas, and he did not have any that were not original. He was one of those general practitioners, so well up in his profession that he could give points to most so-called specialists. If you talked to him long, you wondered if there was any subject under the sun which he had not thought upon. He was ready with striking ideas on every subject from nursery rhymes to Sanskrit. While he was not a member of any church, he was a most pronounced Calvinist, and not many theologians could tell him anything about the shorter catechism. He stated that if he belonged to any church and had not been raised a Presbyterian he would be a Hardshell Baptist. He explained that down in his country the Hardshells were "the people," and that their cardinal article of faith was that no man could remain in good and regular standing in the Hardshell church if he did not pay his debts The man who could pay his debts and did not was promptly turned out of the church. The result was that when the drummers came into that community to sell goods, they had no use for their pocket editions of Dun and Bradstreet. They simply inquired whether or not the prospective customer was a Hardshell. This is the criterion of credit, the SINE QUA NON down there.

Seriously, would it not be a great thing and a good thing if all the churches would adopt this rugged idea of the Hardshells? Why discipline one man because he gets dead drunk, for instance, and not discipline another because he is a deadbeat? Honestly, is not the deadbeat the worse man of the two? Such a church test as this might not be convenient. It might reduce the present church membership; it might bring down some from the topmost eminence of respectability, which would be sad; it might take from the church some of its very pillars. But what are these things in in comparison! Would it not help to winnow out the chaff from the grain? Would it not help to give to that church a strong, honest, sturdy, rugged religion, and is not that after all the best leaven that the religion of any church can have?

But we wander from our scheme for dispensing with the services of Dun and Bradstreet. On account of the necessity of having mercantile reports Dun and Bradstreet are a tax upon the business of the country amounting to millions. If the churches generally would adopt the Hardshell idea, Dun and Bradstreet would have to go out of business, for the simple reason that in that event "Pres.", "Meth.", "Bap.", "Episc.", etc., written after the name would be a man's mercantile rating and a more reliable basis of credit than Dun's and Bradstreet's A, B, C and D. We take off our hats to the Hardshell Baptists. May they flourish long and spread out much.

CREATION'S COMPENSATIONS.

One of the most wonderful books of the time, measured by its far-reaching influence, is "The Art of War," by M. Block, a Vienna banker. It is said that this book influenced the Czar of Russia to call the disarmament conference at The Hague. This book has figured out with mathematical exactness that no two armies equipped with modern rapid-fire guns can now meet in decisive battle without practical annihilation to both, or that if the weaker side takes refuge in a strongly fortified position, the stronger cannot assail it successfully, because it must inevitably be cut to pieces in the attempt. For example, one man behind a tree with a rapid-fire gun and a steady nerve, can defend himself against a dozen advancing across the open to assail him, because he can pick them off one by one before they can get to him. The Vienna banker argues from this that the world's next great war will be the last one, because it will demonstrate the enormous cost and folly and futility of trying to settle national difficulties this way. And here we point our moral, that creation has for everything its compensation. As inventors have year after year perfected and multiplied their engines of destruction, good people would shake their heads and wonder why a kind Providence would allow these things, blind that the infallible Ordainer of events was working out through fire and blood, His own and man's compensation the everlasting peace of the world.

We have not read the Vienna banker's book "The Art of War," and do not know that it has been translated, we have merely read of it; but it is a very striking circumstance that this remarkable book should have been written by a practical business man instead of by a soldier. While the great men who follow the profession of war have been studying how to use most effectively the rapid fire gun, a Vienna banker has figured out in his counting room, with apparent accuracy, that this rapid fire gun is so terrific and appalling in its deadly destructiveness, that the nations of the earth, after one fair trial, will stack their arms forever.

Much has been said about the superb courage of the Boer, and too much cannot be said; but it is his rapid fire gun that has held at bay the world's greatest empire, and when he has retreated into his own hills, if he can carry his gun with him we are afraid he will yet dictate to our English cousins the terms of peace

Scrofula, a Vile Inheritance.

Scrofula is the most obstinate of blood troubles, and is often the result of an inherited taint in the blood. S. S. S. is the only remedy which goes deep enough to reach Scrofula; it forces out every trace of the disease, and cures the worst cases.

My son, Charlie, was afflicted from infancy with Scrofula, and he suffered so that it was impossible to dress him for three years. His head and body were a mass of sores, and his eyesight also became affected. No treatment was spared that we thought would relieve him, but he grew worse until his condition was indeed pitiable. I had almost despaired of his ever being cured, when by the advice of a friend we gave him S. S. S. (Swift's Specific). A decided improvement was the result, and after he had taken a dozen bottles, no one who knew of his former dreadful condition would have recognized him. All the sores on his body have healed, his skin is perfectly clear and smooth and he has been restored to perfect health.

THE PYTHIAN DISTRICT MEETING

THE "BOYS" ROYALLY ENTERTAINAD IN WINSTON-SALEM.

A Large Attendance—The Exemplification of Degree Work—Salem's Splendid Lodge Room.

The Telegram man had the pleasure last night—and early this morning—of attending the district meeting of Knights of Pythias, held with the lodges of Winston-Salem. The meeting was held in the splendidly equipped lodge-room of Salem Lodge, No. 56, but members of Damon Lodge, in Winston, were equally attentive to visitors, along with their good neighbors in Salem.

Grand Chancellar Woodward was present, and said he was there loaded with a long speech, but that the splendid degree work, done in the three ranks of the order, was so interesting and had occupied so much time he would not make his speech. He called for short talks from representatives of visiting lodges and there were several responses.

The meeting was a great success in every respect. Local members vied with each other in showering attentions on the visitors and in making them feel entirely at home. Col. Woodward, always jolly and young, was at his best. He is a favortie with North Carolina Pythians. State Lecturer Jordan, perhaps the best posted Knight in the state, was present and made an instructive talk. Supreme Representative Ebert, who lives in the Twin-City, aided the degree team in its work in a masterly manner.

Speaking of the entertainment of visitors by the Winston-Salem "boys," it was simply superb. It would be hard to conceive anything that could have added to our pleasure or comfort that was left undone. It was complete. Choice and dainty refreshments were served—creams, cakes, apples, oranges, cigars, etc. Even the street cars were at our disposal, and Tesh, Foote, Crist, Ebert, Eaton, McDowell, Kerner and others made us feel so good that we wanted to tarry over Sunday.

The proceedings of the meeting were liberally interspersed with excellent music, both vocal and orchestral. Salem has long been known as a musical town and the Pythians there have caught the spirit. The meeting last night, which lasted until an early hour this morning, will be long remembered.

THREE IMPORTANT CASES.

Scheduled for Hearing in Supreme Court Next Tuesday.

Three cases of interest to Greensboro people are scheduled for a hearing in the supreme court at Raleigh on Tuesday. In each case there is a strong array of counsel, and it is not likely that they will all three be argued on the day set.

One of the cases is that of E. T. Garsed against the city of Greensboro, involving the constitutionality of the law establishing the dispensary and the legality of its establishment under that law. Another is the case of Motley vs. the Southern Finishing and Warehouse Company, and the third is the case of Jordan and Noble vs. the Furnace Company.

A Neat Office.

Solicitor Brooks has moved into his newly equipped office in the Mendenhall building. He now has one of the prettiest law offices in the city, with new and handsome furniture. A large bookcase, built by Mr. M. C. Henley, one of the best wood workmen in the state, is an ornament as well as a convenience. We congratulate Mr. Brooks on his splendid quarters.

New Switch Being Built.

The Southern Railway is putting in a switch half way between Greensboro and Morehead Station. It is only 8 miles from this city to Morehead, yet the trains are so thick that a passing point is needed between here and that place.

Wounded Boy Better.

The victim of the difficulty at the Normal practice school yesterday, John Whittington, is thought to be better today. The wound is a deep one, just below the heart, but it is thought he will get well. He is still being cared for at the college, it being deemed unwise to remove him to his home.

Good Roads Club Meet.

The Good Roads Club of Guilford county met today in the court house at one o'clock, President J. Van Lindley in the chir. Talks on the subject of issuing bonds for the purpose of building macadam roads were made by Prof. Davis, of Guilford College, Prof. Bandy, J. L. King, Mr. Groome and J. Van Lindley. The meeting adjourned to meet again the last Saturday in April at the court house at ten oclock, a. m.

Change of Real Estate.

During the past month the J. Van Lindley Nursery company sold 21 acres of land at $40 per acre to Mr. Ed Holden, a conductor on the Salem-Winston road. This land is located on the Spring Garden road on the north side, next to Wrad's line. They have also sold 114 acres, for about $30 per acre, known as the Willis place. on the extreme west of the company's property. The handsome figure that this land brought, was due largely to a belief that a macadam road would be built by it ere long.

BRIEF LOCAL MATTERS.

The Light Bearers will meet at Centenary church tomorrow afternoon at two o'cloch. The lady manager requests a full attendance.

The incorporators of the Lilly Mill, a new weave mill, going up at Spray, are Messrs. B. F. Mebane, J. S. McAlister and Frank Fuller.

Rev. T. A. Smoot will preach at West Market street church tomorrow morning and night. There will be no communion service. Rev. Dr. Rowe is absent.

Ladies clean your kid gloves with LaBelle glove cleaner. It is not a liquid, leaves no odor and can be used while the glove is on the hand. For sale only by Grissom & Fordham, druggists. 3m.

The Pomona Terra Cotta Company have just finished putting in much new machinery, and are now preparing to increase the capacity of the works about one-third greater than heretofore.

Editor J. W. Bailey, of the Biblical Recorder, and Rev. Jno. E White, of Raleigh will speak at West Washington street tomorrow at 11 o'clock Mr. White will preach in the same church at the evening service.

A young lady with hair four feet and three inches inches in length, is employed in the Hucomuga cotton mill. She would make a valuable addition to the advertising outfit of a manufacturer of hair tonic and doubtless command a nice salary.

Messrs. D. Bendheim & Sons announce in their advertisement an exposition sale of white goods, embroideries, laces, etc., abounding in variety and all the new novelties of the season Not a yard of inferiority, not a price which has ever been lessened in any sale. Be sure to attend Monday and inspect their line.

New Ads Today.

Drs. Moore talk about "real comfort in reading" in their ad today.

All embroideries damaged by water, and other goods at reducee rates at Brown's. See new ad today.

Cylinder Head Blown Out.

The vestibule and local southbound trains were late this morning on account of the blowning out of a cylinder head on the engine of freight train No. 71, between this city and Morehead Station. No one was hurt. There was some excitement at the depot, when it was learned both passenger trains had passed Morehead and failed to show up here, until the news was brought in of the real trouble.

As to Mattress Making.

In the item yesterday in this paper giving the views of a business men on the question of a mattress factory in this city, there was no intention to to overlook the State City Mattress and Upholstering Co., managed by our esteemed townsman, Mr. W. W Workman. Mr. Workman's company manufactures mattresses that for workmanship and material cannot be beat in the world. However, he makes a specialty of the upholstering department, and the idea of the gentleman quoted was the establishment of a mattress factory, exclusive, and on a large scale.

The Benbow Case Again.

Superior court will adjoin this afternoon. The jury in the Wilson case failed to agree and a mistrial was ordered. The Benbow case was reopened in the call of the motion docket and a petition presented asking that the court prohibit the sale by Frazier, commissioner, and allow the case to be again put into the state courts to adjudicate as to the ownership of the judgments estimated at various amounts Judge Moore refused to grant request contained in the petition. An independent action will probably be instituted.

Cruel Treatment.

A horse was hitched in the alley below the Telegram office yesterday about noon and was allowed to remain there all night and until ten o'clock today when Chief Scott had him removed to a livery stable and fed. Some one had carried him some water in an old fish bucket, but he had evidently been without food for twenty-four hours.

It seems the horse had been sold on a mortgage and brought back for a settlement in some way, hitched in the alley pending the settlement and allowed to remain there as above stated. The police are investigating the matter.

CHILDREN'S eyes neglected causes parents to have regrets. Drs. Moore understand the eyes and can help you to save them. Which is it, a few dollars or your little one's eyes? Ponder seriously this important question.

Boers Taking Vinegar.

Cape Town, March 3—It is reported that the Boers are consuming large quantities of diluted vinegar in order to overcome lassitude caused by fumes from lyddite shells.

Next to the Consumer is where we stand in the lumber business. At the kicking post, as it were, in regard to prices.

First comes the owner of the timber. He just woke up to the value of it and wants double last year's prices. Then the sawmill man. He has not been making a fortune and thinks now he should share a little in the general prosperity.

They say to us: "We must have so much for our trees and work." After a while it is "up to you." Don't kick. You don't suppose we have nerve enough to put up prices unless they had first been put up on us. No, indeed. But prices are NOT high. They have been to low and are just now getting reasonable. Your children will be glad to build at double the price it now costs you. It is a trite, but true saying, if you want to build, "Now is the time."

And ours is the place to get the stuff.
